The Great Global Warming Blunder unveils new evidence from major scientific findings that explode the conventional wisdom on climate change and reshape the global warming debate as we know it. Roy W. Spencer, a former senior NASA climatologist, reveals how climate researchers have mistaken cause and effect when analyzing cloud behavior and have been duped by Mother Nature into believing the Earth's climate system is far more sensitive to human activities and carbon dioxide than it really is.

One characteristic of global warming is that it is (as the name implies) global or nearly so (maybe not over Antarctica). In contrast, natural weather variations are regional, tied to natural variations and movements in atmospheric circulation systems.

Roy Spencer (scientist) - Wikipedia

Roy Spencer is also included in a film that argues against the theory of man-made global warming called The Great Global Warming Swindle. He testified before the Waxman committee's examination of political interference with climate science on March 19, 2007.
