Transformative Learning Through Engagement "In Transformative Learning Through Engagement, Jane Fried and Associates provide convincing evidence that transformative learning is a crucial but undervalued aspect of university and college education. The book focuses on the role of student affairs professionals (also referred to as student services in Canada) in supporting transformative learning within a U.S. context, but it offers valuable insights about learning that are of importance to anyone involved in higher education. In drawing

In describing the world of writing on higher education, the adjectives "bold" and "ambitious" are rare. However, Jane Fried and associates' new work, Transformative Learning through Engagement: Student Affairs Practice as Experiential Pedagogy, earns them both. The majority of the book is a multi-chapter treatise by Fried, combining recent developments in neuroscience with constructivist epistemology, experiential learning, Deweyian philosophy, and research/theory on student affairs work.
